

CORVEL speaker at 2nd German-American Energy Conference in Berlin

On March 22/23, 2010 the 2nd German-American Energy Conference took place in Berlin. Leading renewable energy companies as well as high-level government representatives from Germany and the U.S., including Federal Secretaries Rainer Brüderle (Secretary of Commerce) and Norbert Röttgen (Secretary of Environmental Matters) and the U.S. Ambassador to the Federal Republic of Germany, Philip D. Murphy, attended the conference.

The conference addressed the current legal and political framework for renewable energy projects in Germany and the U.S.

Sven Schubert, partner at CORVEL, gave a speech entitled "Project Development in the U.S.: Differences between the U.S. and the German market." Mr. Schubert's co-speaker was Stephen Hall, partner at Stoel Rives, one of the leading U.S.-law firms for renewable energy.

CORVEL is one of the leading law firms in Germany in the area of renewable energy. It advised regarding projects with a total capacity of more than 1,000 MW. The partners in charge for renewable energy matters are Sven Schubert and Felix Brammer.
